

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY
E A S T B A Y

College of Business and Economics
Department of Accounting and Finance
Programs in Accounting, Finance and Taxation
CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, EAST BAY
25800 Carlos Bee Boulevard, Hayward, CA 94542-3067
510.885.3397 • 510.885.7175 (fax) • www.cbe.csueastbay.edu

To Whom It May Concern:

Re: Recommendation letter for Mr. Eric Wasiolek

Mr. Eric Wasiolek is the top student in my MBA Corporate Finance course at California State University East Bay. The course is a core MBA course aimed at teaching students the elements for principles and best practice of corporate financial management. Mr. Wasiolek has the top score in the exam; he has done exceptionally well in all aspects, including class participations, case study, case presentation, and individual research projects.

In comparing his overall performance with that of his peers, Mr. Wasiolek is among the best students I have meet and taught over the last 10+ years – not only compared to the students at California State University East Bay but also other students I taught at other business schools and universities in the U.S. and overseas, such as Boston University.

During his MBA study, Mr. Wasiolek has demonstrated excellent skills and competency in finance and business management. In terms of important skills, he is able to provide creative insights and implications to complex problems and analyses. He pays attention to details, accuracy, and useful implications of results. In terms of knowledge, Mr. Wasiolek has solid training in analytics, quantitative methods and different disciplines in finance, business and management. In his research projects and Harvard Business School case studies, he is able to organize complicated ideas and data into insightful frameworks and practical solutions. For example, he has completed individual research projects in corporate financial management, which are very challenging and required significant amount of time and effort. From these projects, he has worked independently, accessed data from research sources and databases, constructed quantitative financial analyses and valuation models, and provided qualitative policy recommendations and practical implications.

From the academic achievements above, I can see that Mr. Wasiolek is a hard-working individual with strong inner resolve and a real passionate drive for academic and professional excellence. He has demonstrated the top qualities of a graduate student, with his excellent skills, enthusiasm in learning, and energetic efforts.

Equally important, Mr. Wasiolek has demonstrated that he can be an effective leader who can inspire and motivate others. He has excellent communication and presentation skills. These skills will surely allow him to become a successful and important figure in any organization. Meeting him and working with him will surely be a pleasant and stimulating experience.

Without any hesitation, I strongly endorse Mr. Wasiolek on applying for the job position. The position serves as the best opportunity to further advancing his great potentials and promising career.

Yours truly,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Scott Fung", written over a horizontal line.

Scott Fung
Associate Professor of Finance
Department of Accounting and Finance
College of Business and Economics
California State University, East Bay
scott.fung@csueastbay.edu